What is it About Chapel Hill?

by David Searles

I've been telling this to hitchhikers and relatives for months, so now I'll tell you. I'm not sure why I came here. Oh, I have lots of easy reasons, and all of them make sense, but they are not really why I came here. I came because I wanted to . . . I knew which way to fly: I flew South. I flew to Chapel Hill.

I am from New Jersey. I liked it there for cerebral reasons. It was near New York, it had opportunities for better pay, more variety in life, culture and all that. I like North Carolina for no comparable reasons at all. I just packed myself into the old Chevy, cut short the lease, lost the deposit and departed in the midst of an ice storm that topped 11 inches of soggy late winter snow. It took three days and a little help from my friends before I arrived in North Carolina at high noon with the thermometer showing a welcome 72 degrees. Need I say more?

No, but I will. I want to know what it is that really made me come here. There is something beyond the climate, the cheaper housing costs, the reasons in the James Taylor songs; beyond the isms of the South, of North Carolina, the Piedmont, the Triangle, the University Thing, or its locus, Chapel Hill . . .

Chapel Hill? What is it about Chapel Hill? Lots of towns are built around universities — Evanston, Madison, Columbus, Berkeley, Cambridge, even Philadelphia in some ways. But Chapel Hill is something else. It is the Southern University Town. And for intelligentsia types like myself and most of you, I suppose, there is a personal Southern strategy in which Chapel Hill plays a pivotal role. For some, Chapel Hill is a filter through which all the bad things about the region are extracted. All the rednecky stuff, the overt racism, the anti-intellectualism, the roadhouse psychology is left elsewhere and only the artsy-craftsy, smart-in-spite-of-itself thing remains, giving us an island of culture in a sea of unthinking ignorance. This is a myth, of course, like the myth of 3.2 beer. But we need our myths sometimes, to sustain a few workable realities. This is the myth of many who arrive here. It is the myth of the Yankee who carries a braincase full of false perceptions about the South; and it is the myth shared by some people from the South who carry a kind of concealed shame.

The perceptions change in time, as we grow and learn. The experience is one of process, or rather of being processed, one way or another, through Chapel Hill. The town is like some kind of disembarking center for cultural immigrants — or a big lens through which the lines of peoples' lives are refracted as they move toward separate destinations.

And movement is what it's all about. There is movement all the time — on foot between classes, in cars, on bikes, in those new buses, from one grade level to another, one bar to another, to home and back, in and out of town, in and out of stores . . . the movement of browsing, of examining options, of rootlessness. There is always movement here, with process and renewal and rhythm and excitement.

Transience is the town's most obvious feature. Probably few of us here, now will be here in a few years. Just check out the turnover in each new phone book. Lots of people like to stay, especially after they graduate from the University. But there is room for just so many in a town this nice, despite the cancerous growth of lookalike apartments all around the outskirts. Some Ph.D's have jobs washing dishes, just to hang around; but the realities of more opportunity elsewhere push most of us on to other places and nonacademic pursuits.

Chapel Hill affects each of us a bit differently. Just as a lens refracts differently each line of light which approaches at a different angle and wavelength, the process is different for each person whose life passes through the Chapel Hill field of influence. The true immigrants, carrying their own cultural baggage from the outside, go through a strange awakening-changing process. The main thing I like about Chapel Hill is probably this sense of process. I enjoy movement, which is full of the rhythm and wave process.

The Big Wave comes every Fall. The new students flow into town in their parents' cars, and fill the dorms with fresh bodies brought by moms and dads, with sis and little brother and even the family dog, who all freak out on the collegiate glory of the Carolina Inn . . . . The students spread like a stain through town, the experienced ones hustling for apartments near campus, with others settling for a Roberts Associates apartment on the fringe somewhere and all those new people ogling at all the Chapel Hill oddities, from the eclectic quaintness of the Intimate Bookstore and Carolina Coffee Shop to the European alleyway loveliness of the flower ladies to the gigantic disharmony of the pebble and glass NCNB building. All the Franklin Street stores and all the restaurants and, "Gosh I didn't think it would be like this. Hey Dad, you can drink beer at 18 in this town!"

The smaller waves come in surflike motion every week, starting on Monday. The movement, by midweek, becomes more intense almost hotter, changing in group properties almost like uniform substance changes as its molecules are compressed closer together. On Friday the pressure ends and a wave of people recedes back to wherever it come from, leaving the weekend sparser, freer, a time to assert oneself and have some fun, a football game, a free flick, a fraternity party, bar hopping — but the time is short and chwwwoosshhh, Monday's wave spills people back into town and onto campus. Predictable cycles and gutfelt satisfactions. This is a nice place, people.

Lots of changes occur while the cycles go on; new systems (how do you like paying a boothman instead of ignoring a parking meter?), new urbanisms (the smell of old bus exhaust), new complaints, new businesses, new sets of people, changing typicalities, new satisfactions. There are always new satisfactions to replace old ones. And new people with good feelings to replace the older people who got tired of it all and left. Constant renewal.

But admitting affection for Chapel Hill and the University is usually admitting something less than affection for what surrounds it, what it prepares students for. Like it or leave it, there's ole North Carolina out there. And unless you eventually find shelter and satisfactory employment, which is damned unlikely in Chapel Hill, that old motion, that transient energy is going to force your ass out as fast as it came in. And out for a lot of people means all those areas you drive down to when you leave town, all that Variety Vacationland, the Piedmont, the Triangle, all that red earth, southeast deciduous-pineforest and "goodliest land under the scope of heaven" stuff.

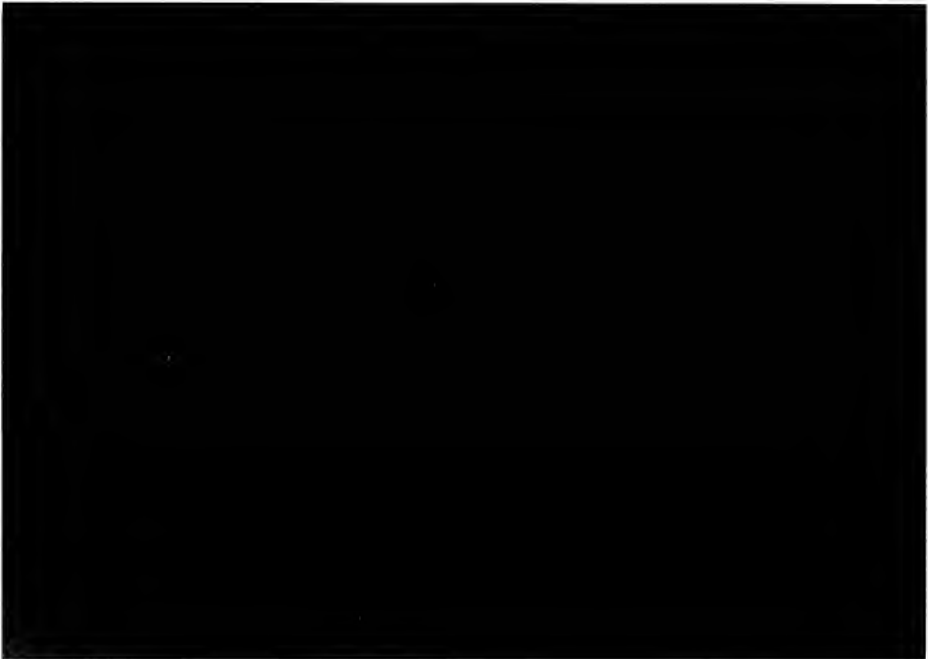

Other NC cities make you even more aware of Chapel Hill's uniqueness. In a state crowded with anonymous lookalike towns that all have classy new glassfront bigsign car dealers, 5 kinds of Burger everything, 4 kinds of chain pizza places, 3 kinds of charco-steak places, 9 kinds of mobile home dealers and Discount everything and at least one K-Mart, one must admit and sigh with relief that Chapel Hill is somehow atypical, even though it has some of those typical elements. It has older shopping centers and a new mall, but it's main feature remains a thriving downtown, which it shares in common with all those smaller towns where most North Carolina people live. Fewer than a million live in all those cities — Greensboro, Raleigh, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, . . . less than a million. The rest, about 4 million, live in places like Wilson, Elkin, Lexington; or more generally in little crossroads towns with a drug store, a branch bank, a convenience store and a gas station. Towns like Gumberry, Askewville, Deep Run, Toxaway, Welcome, Amity, Sneads Ferry . . . the kinds of places Charles Kuralt goes for CBS news. And guess what? Refraction of refractions, Charles Kuralt is from Chapel Hill, just like James Taylor. No she-yit

And hey-ull, this old red earth, good for nothing but growing tobacco and making bricks, produces a whole pile of fine people. Look at the likes of Carl Sandburg, Thomas Wolfe, the Black Mountain Literati and Tom Wicker and just remember where Billy Cunningham and Bob McAdoo went to school.

There's a pride felt here. Alumni come back in droves, and bumper stickers proclaim to the world that "I'd Rather Be In Chapel Hill." The University, steeped in years of academic tradition is refracted through a small town and many different kinds of people into an unforgettable experience. It's almost magical.

Yes, by the time we leave here, our myths are blown apart or confirmed, and we find ourselves remarkably changed to fit the reality of life out there, while surprisingly the reality there has changed just about enough to accommodate us. The rest is left up to our ambitions, to where the force of our refracted life's movement leads us.

As for Chapel Hill, it just keeps on growing a little more beautiful, that's all.

If God had not wanted us to drink, He would not have made Chapel Hill.

That is to say, Chapel Hill places of business leave us few options. There are no dinner theatres, no nightclubs, no liquor by the drink, no brothels, few places to dance.

What we do have are bars, beer bars and lots of them. We have five hip bars, ranging from subtle hip (Cat's Cradle) to bluegrass hip (Endangered Species) to down and out freak hip (Town Hall). We have an old jock frat bar (The Tavern) and a new jock frat bar (McCauley's). We have a preppie bar (The Shack). We have a gay bar (The Electric Co.) And we have a hard hat bar (Clarence's).

What more could anyone want? All manner and variation of bars. And so, on the weekends in Chapel Hill, we drink.

Town Hall's a dive and that's from someone who ought to know. But don't let that scare you. Nothing like an onion bagel after you can't see from all that beer. Can't walk either. (Why do you do such things to yourself? Well, got any better ideas? Town Hall is also good if you want someone to fall over you or make a pass at you. It's sometimes called Pick Up City, and if it's freaks you want, Town Hall is the place.

On the other hand, if you want to be jostled by preppies in starched tennis shirts go to The Shack at night. Preppies always have good loudmouth drunks.

There is something for everybody. That is, if you want to drink beer. You could go to the ABC store at Eastgate where they don't ask for an ID, and take a bottle home and drink like a true ice bucket alcoholic, or put it up on the shelf and impress yourself.

Or you could stay at home and watch T.V. and pretend you aren't at college or in Chapel Hill.

Everything you always heard about Chapel Hill and Carolina and drinking is probably true. You can be cynical if you want, but well, if God hadn't wanted us to drink.

Once upon a time...

by Winston Cavin

Carolina's victory in the ACC tournament of 1975 read like a childhood fantasy. All the elements of a classic fairy tale were there — and The Good Guys won.

No one picked Carolina to win it, with regular-season champ Maryland and defending national champ N.C. State sharing favorite's roles. The Heels had finished in a tie for second during the season, and there was no reason to believe they would send the Terps and the Pack home empty handed.

Then, as quickly as you can say "checkmate," the Heels pulled off a coup d'Etat. A Tar Heel team finally peaked at the right time.

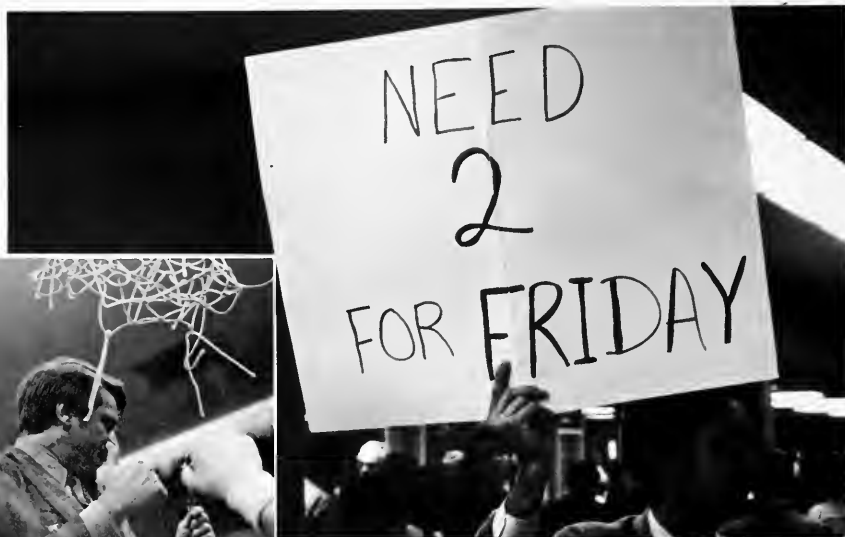

It wasn't easy — no fairy tale is. In the first game of the tournament, the Heels needed 25 points from Ford and 31 from Davis to put Wake Forest down in overtime, 101-100. Carolina looked like a loser, down 90-82 with 50 seconds left in regulation. But Deacon Coach Carl Tacy was left mulling the might-have-beens.

The semi-finals saw Carolina facing the Clemson Tigers. Another overtime, another 29 points out of Ford, another brilliant four-corners, another Carolina victory. This time it was 76-71.

While all that was going on, State was eliminating Maryland in an 87-85 cliffhanger. The dream final was set.

David Thompson's last college game was a sour one. Ford did it again, scoring 22 points and making "Ford-Corners" an instant cliché. State fell, 70-66, to Smith's blue boys and the ACC trophy came home once again.

The Wolfpack came off the throne grudgingly, griping about officiating and the ones that wouldn't drop, but the whole thing turned into an orgy for Carolina fans. For the first time ever, a Tar Heel team won the ACC tourney without winning the regular season title first. And Smith grabbed his fifth ACC title in the last nine seasons.

May 11 Graduation

Farewell to Adam and Eve who arrived here with us in 1971 and have made many things possible (or impossible depending on your outlook).

Farewell to preregistration where we stayed in line all night to get Botany 10.

Farewell to drop-add where we stayed in line all day because we didn't get Botany 10.

Farewell to the Student Stores who showed us how much knowledge cost to buy and how little it is worth when you want to return it.

Farewell to the Shack which we pray still stands.

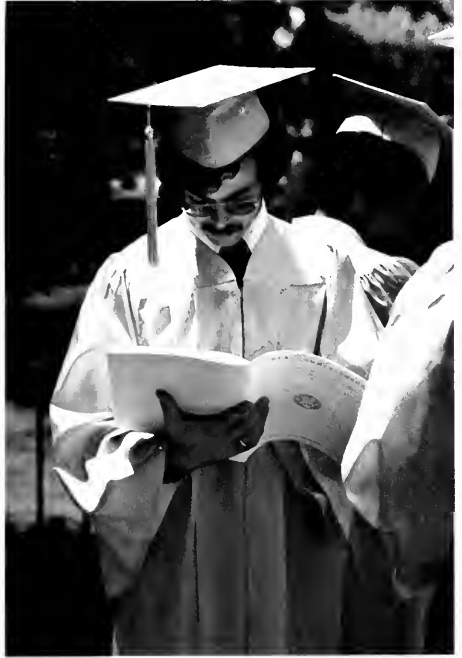

Farewell to the streakers who the police prayed would stand still.

Farewell to Gator Bowls, Sun Bowls, and A.C.C. Tournaments — now we'll never get tickets.

Farewell to the ivy, the stone walls, to hard study, to good times, to good friends.

Farewell to the University of North Carolina which so justly deserves to be called "The Southern Part of Heaven."

Someone has said that we live at the hinge of history. An old world is dying: a new one is painfully being born, and it is not certain that we can survive the transition.

Whether we do depends largely upon the kind of decisions we make during the 1970's. For what we decide to do in this decade could very well determine the future of mankind for the next one thousand years. — Edgar Chasteen

"If there is a single thing that I would hope to have as the hallmark of our activities in the future, it is the mark of integrity — integrity in what we do and how we do it, integrity in the fulfillment of our responsibilities, and integrity in our relations with one another.

Some years ago, I had occasion to characterize the central enterprise of this University as "a never-ending effort to enlighten the mind, ennoble the spirit, and to enrich the whole of human experience." I know of no more worthwhile endeavor in life and none more demanding of our individual and collective integrity."

What remains of this for the faculty is a large stock of memories and a few lasting friendships. We see you as students in class. But we think of you as people whose lives have intersected briefly with ours, and we wonder what has come of that. From now on, therefore, if you remember us occasionally write and tell us how things are going. And may all good fortune be yours on the road ahead. Vale!"

Student Government

Student Government, recognized by most of the campus as the official voice of the student body, has attempted to get involved in many more aspects of campus life than ever before. Besides the services which it has traditionally provided (either directly through its branches or indirectly by funding independent organizations), SG has had an impact on such varying issues as student's rights and liberties, affirmative action, the bus and parking system, and many more.

SG has realized that many factors have contributed to a decline in student activism and awareness, and consequently it has made efforts to counteract it. In the past the student body has seen only the tip of the iceberg of SG activities; by concentrating more on educating and informing students of the matters that concern them, SG has shown them much more.

SG has a long way to go before it assumes the position of power and responsibility on campus to which it is entitled, but this year's administration has proven that it is already a viable vehicle for getting things accomplished.

Treasurer - Tim Dugan

When asked to describe the job of Student Body Treasurer, it seemed a simple task as I had been performing the function for nearly a year's time. After recalling what I had been doing, however, I realized that I might as well try to explain the similarities between the job of a short order cook and a banker. My description is that the treasurer's job lies somewhere between those two jobs. There is, however, one essential criterion for the job, you must be absolutely crazy.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has a student-operated judicial system. The role of the Office of Student Attorney General is to insure that this system is fairly and equitably applied. It has been a year of transition for both the judicial system and the office itself. This year has seen the institution of the new instrument of Student Judicial Governance and the first woman Attorney General.

As the first woman in this job, I felt especially challenged to prove my ability to cope with the problems which are involved. Although at times I wished I had never seen this office, overall it has been one of the greatest experiences I have ever had.

The function of the Student Supreme Court is that of final arbiter of disputes within Student Government. In the last year, this has ranged from disputes between agencies of the Student Government and elections disputes to ruling on the meanings of often hopelessly vague CGC legislation. The problems are always challenging. Attempts to render fair decisions often come after long hours of work and discussion to bring harmony between the Student Constitution, laws, and University traditions.

The primary goal of the Court is to establish policies and guidelines which are consistent with laws and traditions while contributing to the stability of Student Government at UNC.

The better one knows an organization, the more difficult it becomes to define or explain it. The Carolina Union represents a building, of course, but the organization is something beyond that. The Union Activities Group accepts the responsibility of taking student fees and giving them back to the students in the form of programs and activities. Within that realm, we attempt to entertain, to inform, and to educate. Academics being only a part of a college life, we have tried to make the experience more varied and complete. I owe the successes to our director, our associate director, and dedicated chairmen and committee members. The problems we shared — concerts starting late, the acoustics in Carmichael (or lack of them), and a speaker being shouted off the stage. For the most part, however, it was a good year, and the many satisfactions far outweighed the frustrations.

The Campus Governing Council, during its second year as the legislative branch of Student Government, has demonstrated even further its potential to be the influential force that it should and will be. This year the CGC looked closely and critically at itself and its operations. The result was a series of proposed structural changes likely to be implemented in the third session. The legislative processes have been vastly improved over those of CGC's predecessor, but further innovations will occur so that the body will reach its potential. CGC also weathered the loss of one fourth of its members at the start of the year, but a hard working core settled down to create productive and necessary legislation. However, until people who are sincere in their desire to work in Student Government fill all the seats in CGC, the body will fall short. Even with its limited shortcomings, CGC is well on the road after this session to becoming an excellent legislative branch of Student Government.

One of the most active Student Government committees is the UNC Media Board which oversees the financial activities of the DAILY TAR HEEL, the YACKETY YACK, WCAR, the CAROLINA QUARTERLY, and the CELLAR DOOR. The Media Board budget, which exceeds a quarter of a million dollars, is the largest of any single Student Government committee.

During the past few years, the Media Board has worked to achieve financial independence for other organizations. Plans for an FM-stereo radio station have been a major project of the Media Board and Student Government in recent years.

The Media Board elects the editors of all its member organizations except the DTH and chooses the business managers. Student Graphics, Inc., the student print shop, is also under the auspices of the Media Board, the members of which serve as the Graphics Board of Directors.

The Association of Women Students (AWS) serves many purposes. It coordinates activities to create awareness of the social status of women and a wide range of programs designed to examine the many facets of the changing roles of women.

It is also a center for women students, providing research materials and information on issues which specifically concern women on this campus. AWS works closely with the various local women's groups to enlarge the scope of their abilities.

Within the university system, AWS works as an active advocate of women students' rights. It provides a means for women students to reach the administration and make their views known. It was AWS, in conjunction with the Chapel Hill chapter of NOW, who fought the former policy which granted Morehead scholarships to men only.

It is situations like the one above and, for example, Women's Athletics, which indicate the need for an organization which can concentrate in these areas and bring about much needed reforms.

The BSM is an organization whose function it is to offer outlets for the cultural and social expression of Black ideals on campus and in the community. The BSM is also the political vanguard for the protection of the interests and rights of Black students. The BSM also has many performing cultural groups including the BSM Gospel Choir, the Ebony Readers, the Opeyo Dancers, and the BSM Drama Group. In addition to the performing groups the BSM offers such cultural programs as the Ms. BSM Coronation, Black History Week, The Black Cultural Arts Festival, and a host of seminars dealing with various aspects of Black life.

The goal of the Elections Board is to administer the Student Government Elections as efficiently as possible. It is our hope that by conducting these elections on campus we allow for truthful student representation in decision making positions. These representatives provide a necessary liaison between students and the University administration.

Members of the Elections Board are selected by the Board's chairman and subsequently are approved by the Campus Governing Council. The chairman is appointed by the student body president and is also subject to the approval of CGC.

This was the second year of operation for the Student Consumer Action Union, but it is hard to believe that there was a time when SCAU wasn't there to help students with their buying and renting problems.

In September, SCAU was besieged with complaints from Old Well Apartment dwellers about the lack of refrigerators and stoves in their apartments. SCAU arranged a meeting between the tenants and their landlord, Roberts Associates. The result was that by the first of October, tenants received their appliances. Fall saw the re-editing and re-issuing of two SCAU pamphlets, The Southern Part of Heaven?, a guide to apartments in the Chapel Hill area, and The Franklin Street Gourmet, a guide to the restaurants.

In the spring, SCAU began working on a booklet on banking problems, hoping to unravel some of the mysteries of money in Chapel Hill, both in Savings and Checking Accounts. A health consumers' pamphlet was also begun. In General Assembly lobbying, SCAU re-issued its year-old study on North Carolina landlord-tenant problems to the legislators. All the work of the Student Consumer Action Union is carried out by students who volunteer their time and efforts to solve problems related to the consumer.

Newspapers are nothing if not ephemeral, and the DTH changes more quickly than most. Each new editor struggles to make his imprint on 82 years of editorial freedom and to diminish the impact of the inevitable transience of his staff. Whether the change is as slight as the slogan "Chapel Hill's Morning Newspaper" or as major as academic reform, you can rest assured that next year things will change, that a new generation of students will have their own ideas, and that there is no record on Mount Rushmore of your time in office.

Journalism is a lowly craft on its way up in the world, but every year 40 to 50 students still practice it with gusto at a large, largely incoherent university, in a small southern community named Chapel Hill. They risk bad grades, overwork and short tempers for the rather exquisite pleasures of overnight gratification (17,500 times a day in fact), staff fellowship, and ridiculously low wages. And all is in the name of a small-town newspaper career, insatiable curiosity, and a vague, amorphous demi-god called the Tar Heel.

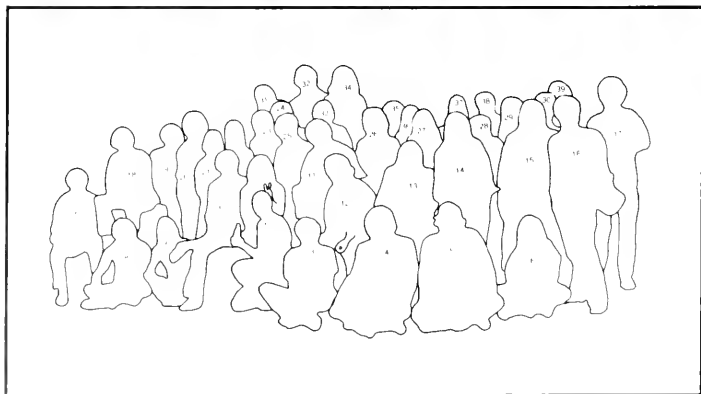

Of course there were high points in the 82nd year such as a first in the Hearst competition, the Cashion affair, the recognition of gays on campus, and the Klan crisis, which, if nothing else, punctuated the lethargy of the general student body. And there were low ones as well, when no one had heard of "detente" or knew whether Polonius was a restaurant or a Greek tragedy. At times you felt like hurling your typewriter at the dark, blank windows, toying with the nuts who sometimes strayed in office, arguing with administrators who did not understand that tomorrow's editorial would only make a once-rewarding relationship triangular, or crying from staff frustration and fear that your membrane of words simply wouldn't stretch around the event.

Our reach exceeded our grasp but a few energetic students did take the time to contribute to a passing medium in a rising profession at a school where few even understood their actions. Yet faculty, freshmen in Morrison, and customers in stores on the way to Hillsborough stopped to read the DTH every day, even when they had trouble finding it, and that somehow made it all worthwhile.

The Yackety Yack

Joyce Fitzpatrick Editor

The yearbook is alive and well at UNC.

Since 1895, the YACKETY YACK has appeared each year as a pictorial record of University life. As students and times have changed so has the YACK changed to reflect these trends.

The yearbook philosophy is simple: to capture four years that are unlike any of those before or of those to come. With the use of quality photography and advanced layout and printing techniques, the yearbook has begun to escape the stereotyped "picture album" concept which constantly plagues it and is developing into a viable journalistic effort.

In the 1975 YACK, we have not forgotten the true purpose of the yearbook. We have presented those events and issues which have served to make this year memorable. We have preserved those traditions which have preserved themselves and we have tried to capture the more intangible charms and chagrins of Chapel Hill and the University that we all experience.

The yearbook is for those who like to look back. Which isn't so bad once in a while.

WCAR

WCAR, Carolina's carrier current radio station, services the majority of the campus dormitories with both entertainment and information. Various music formats are heard on the station, including progressive rock, jazz, soul, and oldies. WCAR's news, sports, and public service staffs keep the campus informed on local, state, and national events. In May 1974, Student Government and WCAR applied for a non-commercial FM stereo radio station with the Federal Communications Commission. Staff members were optimistic that a construction permit would be granted in 1975, with January 1976 as the targeted air date.

With a staff of approximately fifty students, WCAR also serves as a training ground for future broadcasters, as many WCAR alumni have found employment at stations throughout North Carolina and the U.S.

The oldest student organizations in the South, the Di and Phi are among the most active college literary societies in the United States today. With their long-standing objectives of training their members in effective public communication through speech and debate, the Societies have fostered many political leaders and outstanding contributors in other areas in public life. Among these are President James K. Polk, Vice President William R. King, and a score of cabinet officers, senators, governors, educators Charles B. Aycock and Charles D. McIver, novelist Thomas Wolfe and playwright Paul Green.

In addition to their oratorical and forensic goals, the Di-Phi strives to uphold the ideal of the university. The Societies are guardians of Carolina's heritage, and work to combine the best ideals of the university of the past with those of today's university, through programs of faculty speakers, debates and forums on current problems.

Although open to all students, the Veterans Club is oriented primarily toward the student veteran whose needs often differ from those of the other students due to a difference in age and background.

One lives and realizes that his soul is like that of a tree.
Every minute branch flows its separate way.
But the major limb of life connects each branch to the substantial soul which dominates the being.
First one must find the supreme connection of the soul,
And when one realizes exactly where the major limb separates from the different ways —
One will not only know who he is, but what he is.

SPORTS

Tar Heel athletic teams enjoyed a typically successful year in 1974-75. The footballers ran over State, 33-14, embarrassed Wake Forest, 31-0, and slipped past Duke, 14-13 on the way to the Sun Bowl. The 7-5 record, including a heartbreaking 26-24 loss to Mississippi State in El Paso, was not one of Carolina's best. But it was a season marked by long touchdown bombs and astronomical scores.

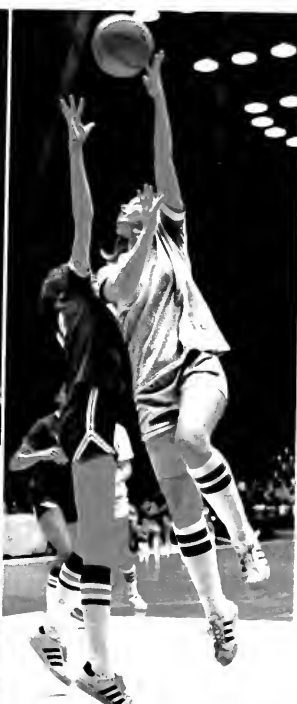

The basketball season, as everyone but the hermits of Tibet must know by now, was a gas. The Heels had their ups and downs throughout the season, but a hot finish brought the ACC tournament title to Chapel Hill. And when the Heels win the coveted conference tourney, the season has to be a big one.

The women's b-ballers had their biggest year to date, and in the process did much to increase local interest in this fast-growing sport. Led by superstar senior Marsha Mann, the Heels won 15 of 18 and played in the National Women's Invitation Tournament in Texas. Although they were on probation and thus ineligible for the state tournament, the Heels proved themselves all season long.

The other sports teams fared well, as usual. The fencing and tennis teams joined the basketball squad as ACC champions. The lacrosse team was nationally ranked again, the women's tennis team enjoyed another near perfect season and the swimmers held their own against tough competition.

There were other heros, other teams too numerous to detail. They were all part of the great cycle of Carolina sports which changes every year, yet remains the same.

UNC Football 1974:

The 1974 Tar Heels enjoyed much success at home while suffering decisive losses on the road.

The season saw victories over arch-rivals N.C. State, Duke, and national power Pitt at home. But disappointing losses at Maryland, Clemson, Georgia Tech and then the Sun Bowl ended the season on a sour note. It was the year of the quarterback as Chris Kupec led the nation in pass completion percentage, while tailbacks Mike Voight and Boom-Boom Betterson made the NCAA record books as each amassed 1000 yards, the first time two men had ever gained over 1000 yards in the same position. Jimmy Jerome broke the ACC record for touchdown passes caught. Guard Ken Huff was a first team All-American choice and was picked third in the 1st round of the pro draft by Baltimore.

The highlight of the season was a 33-14 upset over N.C. State in front of a cheering crowd of 47,000. But after the uplifting win the Heels hit the road and their fortunes changed.

The stars were there, the records were there, but the Tar Heels finished 7-5 with the victories coming at home sweet home.

basketball

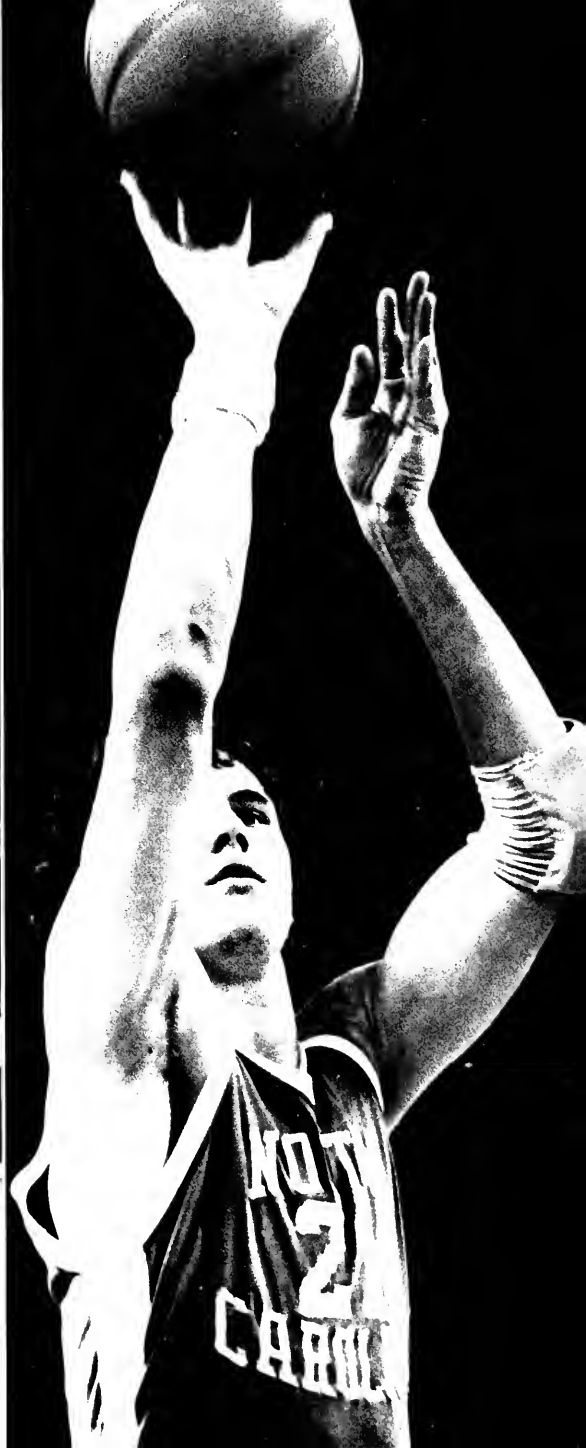

The 1975 season, like many more to come, gave Chapel Hill plenty to scream about. A four month binge of close charging calls, overtimes and pressure free throws paid off — and the Atlantic Coast Conference turned Carolina blue once more.

For two seasons, Carolina teams had seemed one step away from championship potential. The ingredients had been there, but the big one always got away. The Heels were out of the ACC finals, fell in the NIT and never beat N.C. State during the two year span.

In December of 1974, optimism was about as low-key as a Gerald Ford speech. A young team sporting only three seniors (and only one of those starting) didn't appear to stack up against David Thompson's defending national champs.

The first two opponents were cream puffs then came the year's first reckoning with the Big Boys. A trip to Houston (a nationally-ranked team which rarely loses at home) and Kentucky (eventual NCAA runner-up) produced a 1-1 split. The 96-87 Houston victory served notice that this team could do it.

People giggled again.

As quickly as Tar Heel stock had shot up, it got shot down again when Carolina came in fourth in the Big Four Tournament. The season record slumped to 5-3, and people started wondering if the magic could ever be regained.

January looked up, though, despite the cold winds and the incessant rain. A trip to Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum saw the Tar Heels come within an illegal dunk by Phil Spence of pulling off a major upset. The Wolfpack pulled it out, 88-85 in overtime. But there was renewed hope.

And a week later, the Heels did something no team since the McAdoo year had done: they beat Maryland in College Park. Guards Phil Ford, Brad Hoffman and John Kuester worked Smith's four-corners to perfection. And the game-icing offense became the team's trademark.

Now in hot contention for the ACC regular-season title (which, as Maryland found out, means about as much as a 10-minute quiz in Poli Sci 41), the Heels kept the hoots and hollers coming. After an excusable road loss to rapidly-toughening Clemson, the Heels careened to four wins in a row.

Then, like a yo-yo, the Heels fell again. Maryland came into Carmichael Auditorium and turned the tables by the humiliating count of 96-74.

Stocks plummeted once more.

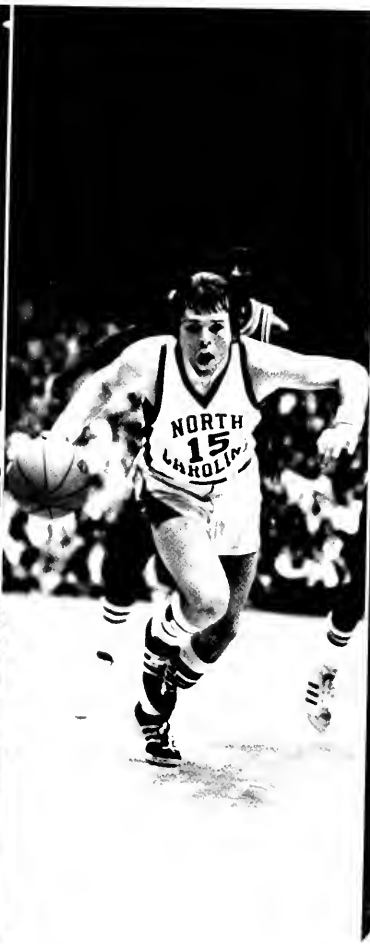

The regular season closed with a bang that could have been heard in Anchorage. With a panting, raving mob cheering and jeering in Sensurround, the Heels finally put State in its place 76-74. It was Thompson's first varsity loss to Carolina. It snapped a nine-game State winning streak over UNC. It gave UNC a tie for second in the ACC. It made Carolina fans believers once more.

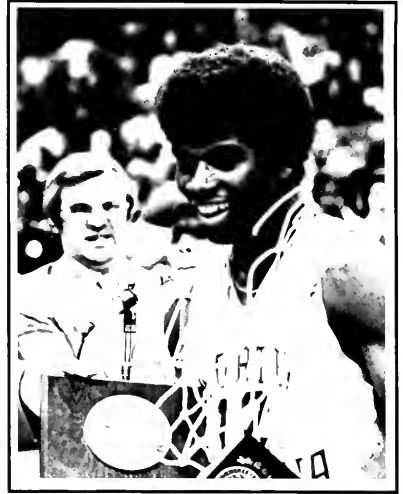

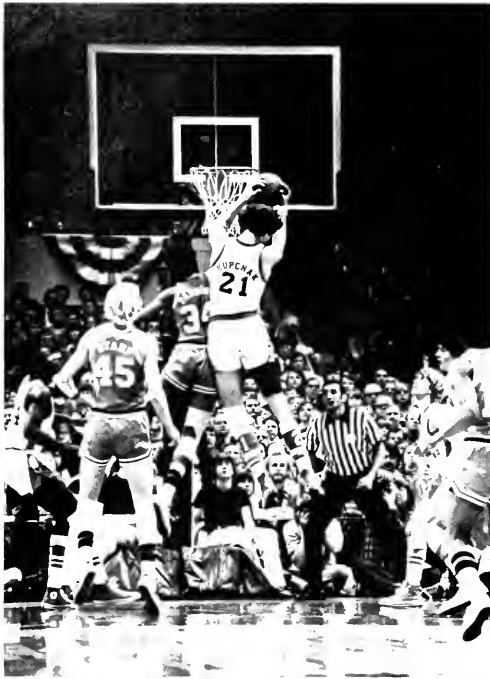

And it proved to the team that they could, indeed, do the impossible.

BEAT STATE

ACC Tournament

After a stirring 74-70 conquest of slinky Duke in Durham, the Heels went into the tournament on a wing and a prayer.

Well, the wing worked and so did the prayer. The Heels rallied from a 90-82 deficit with 50 seconds remaining to send the Wake Forest game into overtime. The final score — UNC 101, Wake Forest 100 — left most fans too limp to watch the rest of the games.

In the semis, the Heels endured another overtime before edging Clemson, 76-71. And then, in the finals, State fell for the second time in 10 days to Carolina blue, 70-66, Phil Ford was named MVP. The championship returned to Chapel Hill and the people giggled more authoritatively than ever before.

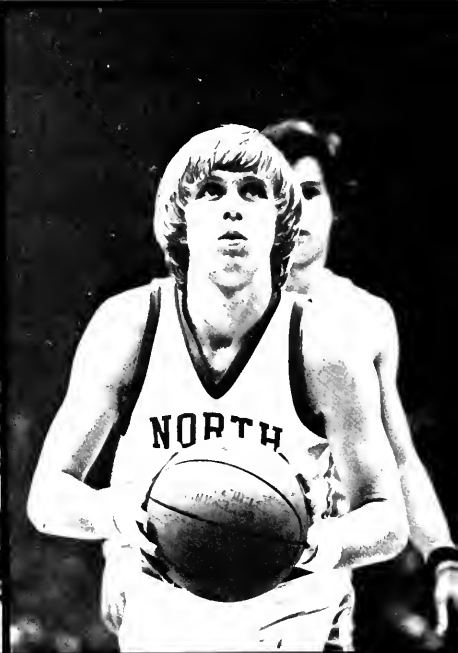

While spring was trying its best to pop out, the NCAA germ spread through the town and everybody was making reservations in San Diego, the site of the finals. It wasn't meant to be.

After a 93-69 shellacking of a respectable New Mexico State team in the NCAA first round, optimism peaked again. Then came the infamous 78-76 loss to Syracuse in the Eastern Regional semis — and a dream died.

Still, no one could have asked the Heels to try any harder. They shot 65 per cent, made their last 12 free throws and led until the last three seconds. A 110-90 skunking of Boston College saved third place in the regional, however, and the Heels ended the season with a victory, something no other ACC team did.

Everybody was a star on this young team. There was Phil Ford, the 6-2 Rocky Mount freshman who ran the four-corners offense to perfection and made the cover of Sports Illustrated with his almost single-handed destruction of State in the ACC tourney.

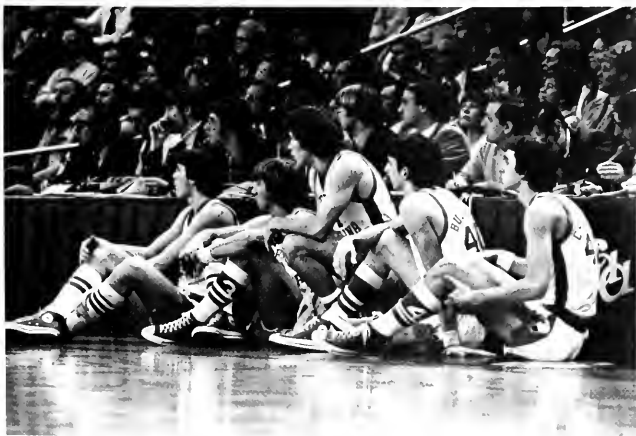

There was senior guard Brad Hoffman, who had waited four years to prove himself and didn't miss from the 30 ft. range.

There was junior Mitch Kupchak, a sure bet for 1976 All-American honors and sophomore Walter Davis, who lived up to his press clippings in fine — and often breathtaking fashion.

And, in true Carolina basketball tradition, there was the Blue Team. The "scrappers" as Smith called them, were made up of five bench-dwellers who came in every game to relieve the starters and who, like the other stars, had their moments in the sunshine as well.

And when the season was over, people were still giggling. It was Spring.

Co-captains Marsha Mann and B. J. Woodard led the Women Cagers to a regular season record of 14 wins and only 1 loss. Interest grew and attendance swelled as the women regularly trounced their opponents. Carolina, on probation in the NCAA AW, were ineligible for the regular state and national tournaments. The team, however, won a bid to the National Women's Invitational Tournament in Amarillo, Texas which invites 8 top teams yearly. In Texas, the women scored one win and two close losses with a total margin of four points deciding all three games. Mann made the tournament All-America team after setting a tourney record in rebounds.

Lacrosse

Pre-season expectations were high for this talent packed and young UNC Lacrosse Team, but a five game losing streak early in the season served to dampen the enthusiasm a bit.

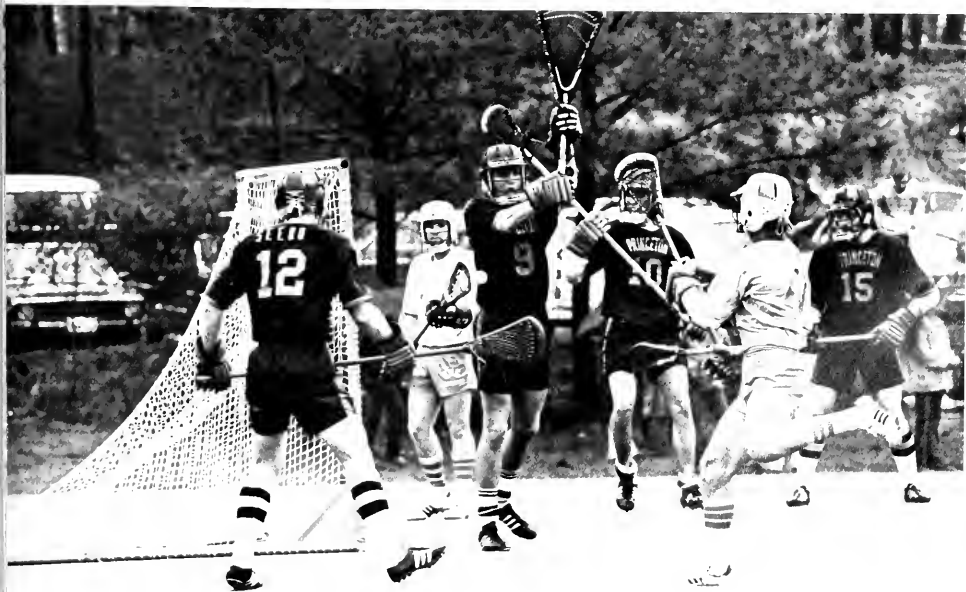

Led by All-American Bert Felt, the team remained nationally ranked all season. The Tar Heels enjoyed a good showing in the Heroes' Tournament in March, losing a close one to No. 1 Maryland in sudden death overtime.

The season ended on a good note, however, as the team took five wins in a row, including a 13-12 decision over perennial power Washington and Lee.

Women's Tennis

Behind the strong play of junior Jane Preyer and leadership of senior captain Beth Hamilton, the women's tennis team enjoyed another successful season and boasted an impressive record of 13 wins and only 1 loss.

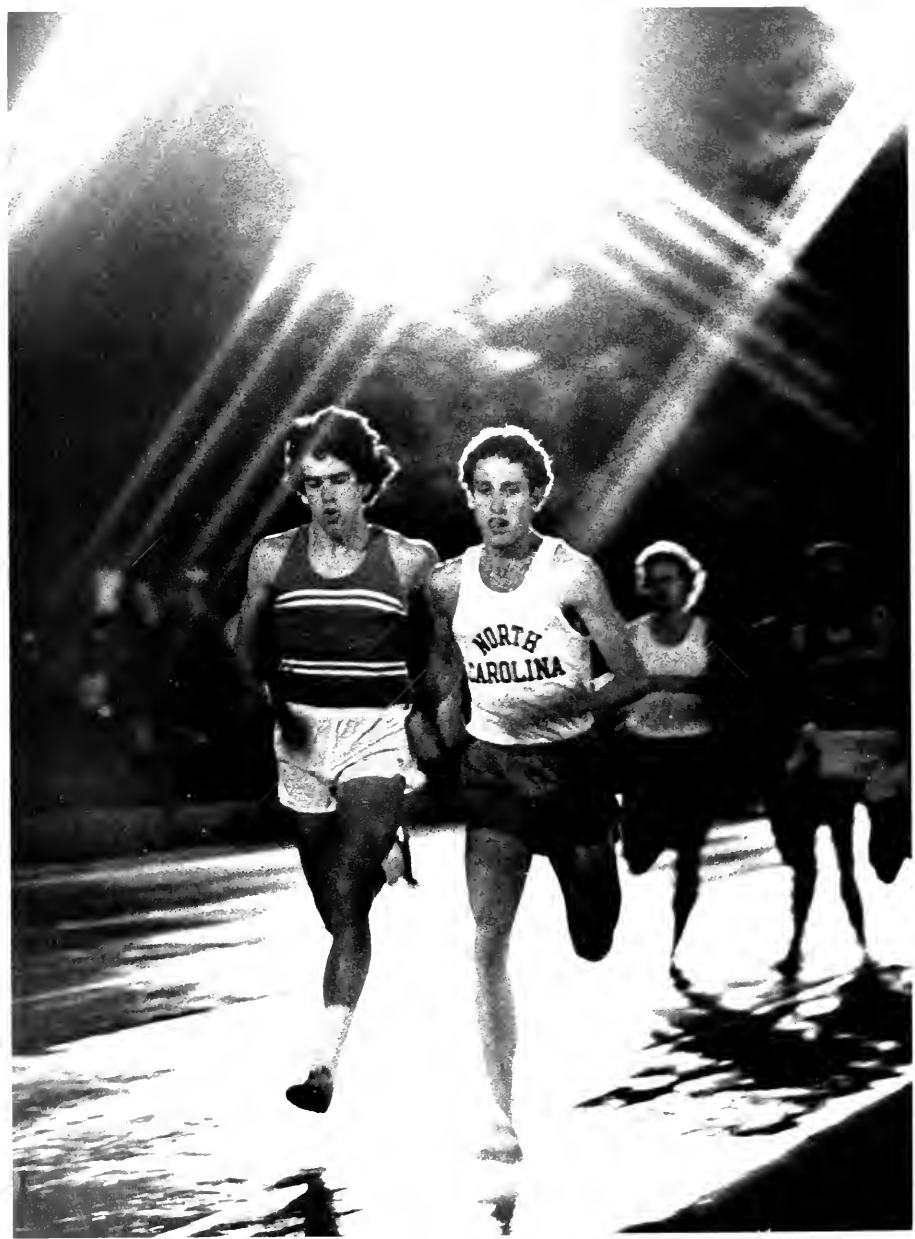

The team exhibited great depth and included much heralded freshman Camey Timberlake, UNC's first woman to receive an athletic scholarship.

Panhellenic

One of the primary goals of Panhellenic for 1974-75 is that of campus involvement not only for the individual but for the system as a whole. In March, all nine sororities along with various fraternities contributed approximately twenty percent of the total funds of the Y's "starvation" to help alleviate hunger in Bangladesh and North Carolina. Panhellenic is also assisting the Orientation Commission with a more personalized and innovative approach to orientation for junior transfers.

An integral part of the sorority system is the continuation of high scholastic averages each semester. 1974 saw the largest number of women ever to pledge at the University. Because of the rapid increase in the enrollment of women plus the increasing response of women interested in the Greek system, Panhellenic is working seriously to colonize a new chapter in the fall of 1975.

Panhellenic serves as the coordinating and governing body of all nine sororities at the University. As President, I find the emphasis on high academic attainment and more personalized involvement with campus organizations a necessity for the total experience of group living.

Robin Levina
Panhellenic President

North vs. South

by Mike Harvey

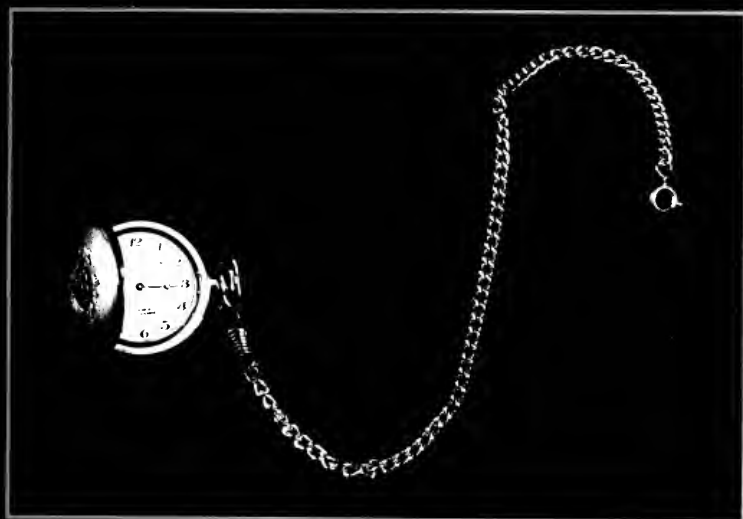

Towering repetition starkly contrasted to subdued, elegant uniformity. South campus dormitories shy away from one another, they posture, view each other with awed silence. North campus dormitories cluster, huddle, they converse with one another.

The routines of those within reflect the difference. One can never get to know everyone in the dorm on south campus. Schedules must be geared with the five to ten minute walk to class in mind. Activity pinballs from suite to suite. Parties are more frequent perhaps, at least announced parties.

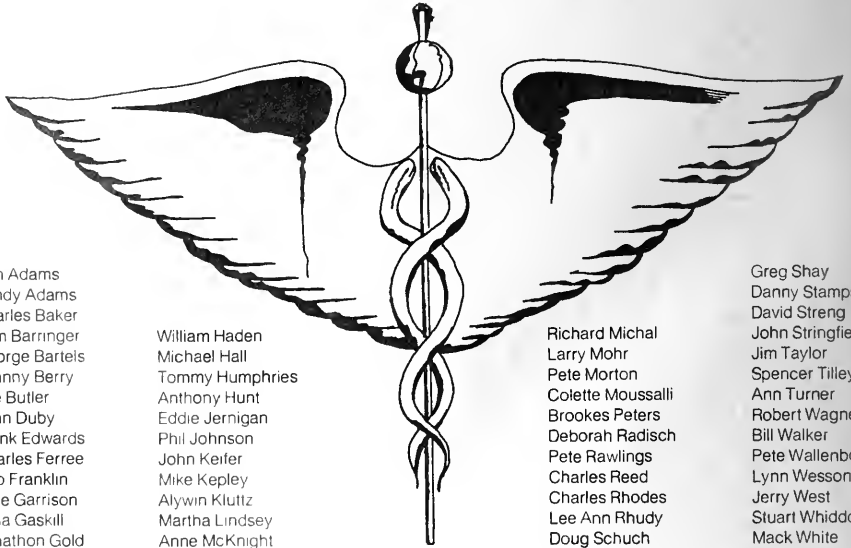

North campus lifestyles are perhaps less detached. Interaction centers on a cluster, not just one dorm. There is far more shade. Inhabitants stare tradition in the face.

Each person is a universe, some with No Trespassing signs on their fences. The universe is contained within one of two dormitory environments. The environment, like an active organism, perpetually alters, modifies in response to the universes. Metamorphosis is mutual.

Our patron Janus has two faces, looking in opposite directions, they symbolize hindsight and foresight. Janus is head of all human enterprises. He is promoter of initiative.

The Society of Janus is an Honorary Society established to recognize men and women in the University Community who have rendered outstanding service to residence life at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The most prestigious scholarship awarded by the University is the James M. Johnston Award. This program is made possible through the generosity of the James M. Johnston Trust for Charitable and Educational Purposes, which is administered by its Trustees. In carrying out the will of the late James M. Johnston, the Trustees have stipulated that academically superior young men and women be extended scholarship awards to recognize their scholarly merit and to assist them financially in achieving their educational goals. The Johnston Awards Program is administered through the Student Aid Office at Chapel Hill under the direction of the Johnston Trustees and the University Committee on Scholarships, Awards and Student Aid. Johnston Undergraduate Scholarships are awarded to the most academically outstanding students entering the University.

The Order of the Valkyries, established in 1941, is U.N.C.'s highest honorary organization for women students. The Valkyries recognizes and honors junior and senior women who are considered to be most outstanding in their given areas of involvement, in their scholastic endeavors, and in their leadership efforts. The number selected each year, which includes those tapped in both fall and spring, is limited to no more than two percent of the women enrolled at the university.

WINNER

Cole C. Campbell: "Heroin: A Call for the De-Criminalization"

FINALISTS

Lawson H. Caldwell: "Animal Over-Population and the Animal Protection Society"

Evelyn F. Dove: "Pornography: Is Repression Better than Freedom?"

Carl R. Fox: "Physical Conditioning — Near Extinction in the College Environment"

R. Edward Furr, Jr.: "The Importance of Being International"

Mary C. Rudd: "Leaders, Leadership: Where Are They and Where Have They Been?"

The Frank Porter Graham Awards, established in 1963, are presented under the sponsorship of the Yackety Yack to those seniors who have made outstanding contributions to the University community. The awards are given in honor of Dr. Frank Porter Graham, past president of the University. It was Dr. Graham's dedication to the principles of equality, dignity and peace among men and his devotion to the improvement of the quality of life that prompted the establishment of these awards in his honor.

Try to remember when you pack to come to Carolina that you've got to take all that junk back home eventually. In addition, you'll have all sorts of memorabilia of life in Chapel Hill to lug around. The first rule of travel is to pack light. If you live relatively close to Chapel Hill, you can bring luxuries up in stages through weekend visits home. If you live further away, packing light becomes even more important, as you'll see when you check shipping rates.

Cardboard boxes are good for packing bulky things. Just remember to save the boxes. When it's time to leave, the whole campus begins a frantic search for boxes. Around May be sure to guard your boxes: some unscrupulous elements of Carolina society are not beyond ripping off your best box. A box saved is a box earned or something.

Although Carolina set some national streaking records last year, many people still wear clothes. In fact, soon your parents may be saying, "I just can't keep Junior in clothes anymore." Anyway, jeans, pullover sweaters, and the like are most commonly worn. Dresses and more formal attire are still around though. A sturdy umbrella and other rain equipment is essential, especially during the spring monsoon.

Boredom and the General College Blues

By Doug Clark

College is not for everyone. I have heard that sentence often enough to believe it, but I always thought it was meant for others. Lately, however, I have come to suspect that I am one of those who should not be here.

Needless to say, the General College experience has been less than rewarding for me. I have been forced to take courses in subjects totally objectionable to me, where I have learned little that I can see as being useful to me in later life. The reasons for taking these courses are truly beyond me, and the fact that I have gotten high grades from them with minimal work invested is just another point against the grading system. As for my major field of study, I have not yet been able to get into the first course, as juniors are given preference. This only confuses my already muddled future ambitions. I'll have to officially declare my major before I can form any real opinions of the subject.

College doesn't need me. Do I need it? I've learned more about life working summers in the mills, but I've also learned that that's no life for a human being. I like Chapel Hill and I like being at the University. I sincerely hope that after my matriculation from General College and entry into my major field I will find something meaningful here. If not, I won't be too surprised. My first 13 months here have given me cause to believe that college is indeed not for everyone, not even everyone already there.
